Armstrong and Charlie by Steven Frank  Charlie isn't looking forward to sixth grade. After all, if he starts sixth grade, chances are he'll finish it. And when he does, he'll be older than his older brother ever was. Armstrong isn't looking forward to sixth grade, either. This year, he'll have to wake up at 5:30 to ride a bus to an all-white school in the Hollywood Hills. When Armstrong and Charlie are assigned seats next to each other, what starts as a rivalry becomes a close friendship. Set in Los Angeles in the 1970s, this is the hilarious, heartwarming tale of two boys from opposite worlds. Different, yet the same.

Top Prospect by Paul Volponi  He's a standout QB by the time he reaches middle school, and he's prepared to put everything into the game: blood, sweat, and tears. When Travis's older brother joins the elite football program at Gainesville University, Gainesville's head coach makes Travis a once-in-a-lifetime promise: Travis will have a place on the team too, and a scholarship to go with it. He just has to make it through high school first. As Travis starts ninth grade, he'll have to earn his teammates' trust and dodge opponents aiming to sack the star quarterback. But his biggest challenge might be staying focused in the face of sudden fame.

Refugee by Alan Gratz  A heart-wrenching escape story, a coming-of-age tale, a treatise on the hopes and traumas of refugees the world over—with the civil war in Syria still raging and immigration a hot-button issue across the world, Refugee could not be more timely.

A Blind Guide to Stinkville by Beth Verbel  Alice is a character who desperately wants to show the people around her that she can accomplish her goals regardless of her condition, and many individuals will be able to relate to her. Written in the first person, this is a very enjoyable story.

Feeling like a failure, he comforts himself with food. Garvey is kind, funny, smart, a loyal friend, and he is also overweight, teased by bullies, and lonely.

The Skeleton Tree by Iain Lawrence  Chris and Frank, almost perfect strangers, are stranded in the Alaskan wilderness after a boating accident. Will they be able to survive without any supplies and winter quickly approaching?
